Cyber-attack stopped

17 November 2026 12:55 (GMT-5)

Last modified 20 November 2026 03:12

Update 20 November 2026, 08:55 CET: The cyber-attack against Equinor has now been stopped.

Production is running as normal, and there is no indication that data has been stolen or altered.

There is also no indication that the attack has had any negative consequences for employees, partners or suppliers.

The incident has been reported to the police.

The cyber-attack detected by Equinor is still ongoing, and work to stop the attack and restore full integrity to the affected systems continues. It is too early to say how long this work will take.

Production is running as normal, and there are no indications that data has been stolen or altered.

The attack does not appear to be specifically targeting Equinor.

Equinor is in continuous contact with the relevant national security authorities and has reported the matter to the police.

* * *

Update 18 November 2026, 09:47 CET:

Equinor has gained a clearer understanding of how the attack was carried out and which systems have been affected.

As this is not a virus attack, there is no risk of the attack spreading. At present, there is no indication that the attack has consequences for employees, partners or suppliers. Production remains unaffected.

Work is ongoing to neutralise the attack and restore the full integrity to the affected systems. It is too early to determine how long this will take. Equinor continues this work in dialogue with national security authorities.

* * *

Original news item, 17 November 2026, 18.55 CET:

Equinor has detected an ongoing cyber-attack against certain IT systems.

Relevant resources have been mobilised to neutralise the attack and regain full integrity.

There are no indications that data has been stolen. The attack has not affected Equinor's operations and production.

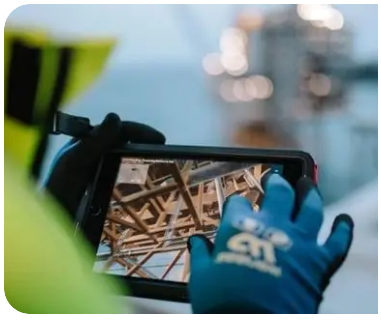
Relevant authorities are being informed.

Equinor will provide updates when new information is available.

Latest news

24 NOVEMBER 2026

Equinor and VNG sign 18-year gas sales agreement for supplies to Germany



20 NOVEMBER 2026

Announcement of cash dividend of NOK 3.7448 per share for second quarter 2026

18 NOVEMBER 2026

Notifiable trading

Explore

Investors

Careers

Sustainability

About us

Contact us

Connect

Facebook

Instagram

LinkedIn

Youtube

Site

Privacy policy

Cookie policy

Accessibility statement

Terms and conditions

Site info

Copyright 2026 Equinor ASA